

We are read everywhere

In 2024, more than 60,000 unique viewers worldwide have read Rhode Island Medical Journal articles or researched topics from its archives, rimedj.org.

CARLSBAD, CALIFORNIA

Michael Migliori, MD, FACS, RIMS Public Laws Chair, and Ophthalmologist-in-Chief at Rhode Island Hospital, refers to RIMJ online archive, at rimedj.org, between sessions at the AMA State Advocacy Summit, held January 9–11 in Carlsbad.

AMA State Advocacy Summit panel participants discussed Medical Student and Physician Wellness [L-R]: Humayun Chaudhry, MD, president and CEO Federation of State Medical Boards; Stefanie Simmons, MD, Chief Medical Officer, Dr. Lorna Breen Heroes' Foundation; Elizabeth Struble, MD, Chair Commission on Legislation, Indiana State Medical Association; Michael J. Baron, MD, MPH, President Federation of State Physician Health Programs.

Dr. Glaucomflecken, (stage name of William E. Flanary, MD, an American comedian and ophthalmologist) known for his medical satire, performs at conferences and on social media. Glaucomflecken is a symptom of acute angle-closure glaucoma.

The AMA reports that the conference focuses on health care issues that states will likely address in the coming legislative sessions, such as prior authorization, scope of practice, physician wellness, the overdose epidemic, and reproductive health, and is attended by more than 300 physician leaders and medical society staff.

Wherever you may be, or wherever your travels may take you, check the Journal on your mobile device, and send us a photo: mkorr@rimedj.org.