

ETHICS STATEMENT

The Rhode Island Medical Journal (RIMJ), a monthly publication, is owned and published by the Rhode Island Medical Society. Published articles represent the views/research of the authors and do not reflect the official policy of the Rhode Island Medical Society.

PUBLICATION ETHICS

The Rhode Island Medical Journal requires authors to adhere to the following ethical and financial disclosure requirements listed below.

A. Ethical Approvals

Provide an ethical approval statement for original research reports, case reports, images, commentaries, videos, within the text, or as an acknowledgment.

Examples of approval statements: Ethical approval to report this submission was obtained from: Name of Ethics Committee or Institutional Review Board.

—or—

Our institution does not require IRB approval for reporting individual cases or case series.

B. Disclaimer

A disclaimer is used to separate the views of the authors from those of employers, funding agencies, organizations, or others.

Example: The views expressed herein are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the views of the affiliates' university, institution, employer, etc.

C. Financial disclosures

All authors will need to submit a financial disclosure form to report any "relevant financial relationships," defined as financial relationships in any amount occurring within the past 12 months that create a conflict of interest. Actual conflicts of interest arise when individuals have both a financial relationship with a commercial interest and the opportunity to affect the content of a publication about the products or services of that commercial interest.

Funding: Authors must report granting or funding information.

None: If there are no financial disclosures, authors can include a statement at the end of the document.

Example: Disclosures: The authors report no financial disclosures relevant to this manuscript.
